Epic Fragments Anonymous I is not a single author but a modern designation for a collection of unattributed epic verse fragments. The label adespota signifies works of unknown authorship. The fragments date from the 8th to the 4th century BCE, a period spanning the Archaic and Classical eras of Greek epic production.

The collection consists of fragmentary verses in dactylic hexameter. These fragments likely originate from lost poems of the Epic Cycle, other early narrative epics, or works of known poets where attribution is lost. They are preserved through quotations in later authors, papyri, and summaries like the Chrestomathy attributed to Proclus.

These anonymous fragments are essential for reconstructing the breadth of early Greek epic tradition beyond Homer and Hesiod. They evidence a vast, interconnected body of myth that formed a shared cultural framework. Their study helps illuminate narrative connections between major myths, the oral-formulaic tradition, and the processes of canon formation.
