

Σιμύλος ὁ Ἐλεγειακός

Simylus the Elegiac Poet on Art and Human Excellence

eul_aid: gfe

Period: Κλασική Classical
Dialect: Ἑπική Epic \(Homeric\)
Domain: Ποίησης Poetry
Format: Ἑμμετρος Verse

Life Simylus is identified as a 4th-century BCE elegiac poet, but no direct biographical information about this figure exists in ancient sources. The name appears elsewhere: Menander mentions a character named Simylus in his comedy Dyskolos.

The 10th-century Byzantine encyclopedia, the Suda, records several individuals named Simylus, including a 3rd-century BCE comic poet and a writer of parodies, but does not attest an elegiac poet from the earlier Classical period.

No elegiac fragments are recorded for Simylus. The Suda attributes a work titled Paidia to a Simylus, but specifies this individual as a writer of parodies, not an elegiac poet. The two works suggested by later metadata remain unidentified in primary sources.

The figure of "Simylus the Elegiac Poet" from the 4th century BCE lacks direct attestation in surviving ancient literature and standard modern reference works. His historical significance and literary influence cannot be established. The name is known only from other contexts, primarily comedy and parody.

Works (2)

- Ἀποσπάσματα · On the Nature of Art and Wisdom · 3 passages
- Ἀποσπάσματα · On the Senses and Human Excellence · 21 passages