

Πυθόκλης

Pythocles on Italy

eul_aid: jjc

Period: Ἑλληνιστική Hellenistic

Dialect: Κοινή Koine \(frg\)

Domain: Ἱστορία History

Format: Πεζός Prose

Pythocles was a figure of the 3rd century BCE. No secure biographical details survive for a historian of this name from the Hellenistic period. The name was common, and the primary individual known as Pythocles was an Epicurean philosopher and friend of Epicurus.

A single historical work is tentatively associated with the name. The 10th-century Byzantine encyclopedia, the Suda, records a Pythocles as the author of On the Festivals in Athens. This attribution is undated, leaving it uncertain whether this refers to the 3rd-century BCE figure or a later namesake.

If Pythocles authored On the Festivals in Athens, the work would be a contribution to Attidography, providing valuable evidence for Athenian religious customs. The historically significant Pythocles, however, remains the Epicurean philosopher to whom Epicurus addressed his Letter to Pythocles on meteorological phenomena.

Works (1)

- Ἀποσπάσματα περὶ Ἰταλίας · Fragments on Italy · 6 passages