No biographical information exists for an author named Assembly of the Birds, as this is the title of a work, not a personal name. The poem dates from the Late Antique or early Byzantine period, between the 4th and 10th centuries CE, but its creator remains anonymous.

The sole known work is the poem Assembly of the Birds, composed in Byzantine Greek verse. Its state of preservation is not recorded.

The work's significance is undefined due to a lack of surviving detail. Its title implies a potential connection to allegorical or fable traditions, but no content, context, or influence is attested in the extant source record.
