

Ἑγησινάξ Ἀλεξανδρότροιανός

Hegesianax of Alexandria Troas on Trojan Legends

eul_aid: kqe

Period: Ἑλληνιστική Hellenistic

Dialect: Κοινή Koine

Domain: Ἐπιστήμη Science

Format: Πραγματεία Treatise

Hegesianax of Alexandria Troas was a Greek writer from the Troad active in the 2nd century BCE, likely during the reign of Antiochus III the Great. He is sometimes identified with an ambassador of Antiochus III to Rome in 190 BCE, though this is uncertain. He was a contemporary and possible friend of the poet Aratus of Soli.

His known works include the Troica, a history or mythological account of the Trojan War and the Troad region, and a work on Phrygia. Some ancient sources also credited him with the epic poem Cypria, an attribution that placed him in debates over the authorship of the Epic Cycle. All his works are lost, surviving only in fragments cited by later authors.

Hegesianax's significance lies in these fragments, which were used as sources by later historians and mythographers like Strabo. His writings exemplify the Hellenistic antiquarian interest in local histories and the reconstruction of mythic pasts.

Works (3)

- Ἀποσπάσματα καὶ Τίτλος · Fragments and Title · 2 passages
- Ἀποσπάσματα περὶ Θαλασσῶν Πυρίνων · Fragments on Fiery Seas · 2 passages
- Ἀποσπάσματα · Trojan Legends · 11 passages