

Βίων ὁ Σμυρναῖος

Bion of Smyrna and the Adonis Epitaph

eul_aid: mwq

Period: Ἑλληνιστική Hellenistic
Dialect: Δωρὶς βουκολική Doric Bucolic
Domain: Ποίησις Poetry
Format: Ἑμμετρος Verse

Bion of Smyrna was a Greek poet of the Hellenistic period, most likely active in the late second or early first century BCE. He is recognized as a writer of bucolic, or pastoral, poetry, a tradition centered on idealized depictions of rural life. The biographical details concerning him are obscure and often conflated with legends about other poets. Ancient sources report that he was born in Smyrna in Asia Minor, spent time in Sicily, and died in Euboea. The tradition that he was a student of the poet Moschus is generally regarded by modern scholars as a literary fiction rather than a historical fact.

Very little of Bion's poetry survives. His most famous and only complete extant work is the Lament for Adonis, a pastoral dirge mourning the death of the mythological youth Adonis. A small number of other fragments of his bucolic verse are preserved, including pieces on Achilles and Eros. Many works once attributed to him in ancient catalogs are now lost.

Bion's significance lies in his role in the development of the pastoral tradition after its foundational figure, Theocritus. His Lament for Adonis is a prime example of the pastoral dirge, skillfully blending mythological narrative with emotional and descriptive language drawn from the rustic world. This poem directly inspired the later Lament for Bion, a work that mourns the poet himself, thereby establishing a chain of literary imitation. Through these works, Bion helped shape the conventions of the bucolic genre, influencing subsequent Greek and Roman pastoral poetry.

Works (3)

- Αδώνιδος επιτάφιος · Adonis Epitaph · 98 passages
- Μύρσων καὶ Λυκίδας · Myrson and Lycidas · 32 passages
- Ἀποσπάσματα · Pastoral Dialogue on the Seasons · 79 passages