

Διονύσιος ὁ Σινωπεύς

Dionysius of Sinope the Comic Poet on Cooking and Strategy

eul_aid: fsc

Period: Κλασική Classical
Dialect: Ἀττική Attic (com, frg)
Domain: Κωμωδία Comedy
Format: Ἑμμετρος Verse

Dionysius of Sinope was a comic poet active in the 5th century BCE during the era of Old Comedy in Athens. He was a citizen of Sinope, a Greek colony on the Black Sea coast. Beyond this origin and his profession, no details of his life are known.

He is credited with writing at least one comedy, titled Lemnomeda. A single, brief fragment from this play survives. A later Byzantine encyclopedia also attributes a second comedy, titled Sappho, to him, but both works are otherwise lost.

Dionysius is considered a minor figure, but his inclusion in ancient records is significant for modern scholars. It helps illustrate the geographical reach and the broad number of participants in Athenian Old Comedy. The title Lemnomeda suggests his work involved mythological parody, a common theme of the genre. The attribution of a play about the poet Sappho also places him among other comic poets who used this subject. Because his work survives only in fragments, a full assessment of his style or contribution is not possible.

Works (2)

- Ἀποσπάσματα περὶ Μαγειρικῆς καὶ Στρατηγικῆς · Fragments on Cooking and Strategy · 70 passages
- Ἀποσπάσματα περὶ Μαγειρικῆς καὶ Στρατηγικῆς · Fragments on Cooking and Strategy · 71 passages