

Μαΐϊστας ὁ ἐποποιός

Maiistas the Epic Poet and the Aretalogy of Ptolemy IV

eul_aid: jom

Period: Ἑλληνιστική Hellenistic

Dialect: Ἑπική Epic \(Homeric\)

Domain: Ἔπος Epic

Format: Ἑμμετρος Verse

Maiastas was a Hellenistic epic poet of the 3rd–2nd centuries BCE. No biographical details survive; he is known only as the author of a single commemorative poem.

His sole known work is the epic Ammon (or Ammonias), composed to celebrate Ptolemy IV Philopator's victory over Antiochus III at the Battle of Raphia in 217 BCE. Only one hexameter line survives. The poem's narrative likely involved a consultation with the oracle of the Egyptian god Ammon, identified with Zeus.

Maiastas exemplifies the continued production of historical epic in the Homeric style during the Hellenistic period. His work is a clear instance of court poetry designed to glorify a monarch's military achievements and assert divine sanction, situated within the context of Ptolemaic–Seleucid rivalry. Its near-total loss highlights the fragmentary state of much Hellenistic literature.

Works (1)

- Ἀρεταλογία · Aretalogy · 65 passages