

Πυθαίνετος ὁ ἱστορικός

Pythaenetus on the History of Aegina

eul_aid: awi

Period: Ἀρχαϊκή Archaic

Dialect: Ἀττική Attic \(frg\)

Domain: Ἱστορία History

Format: Πεζός Prose

Pythaenetus the Historian was an obscure Greek historian of the Classical period, active in the 5th or 4th century BCE. No biographical details concerning his origin, background, or associations survive.

He is known only from a single fragment cited by Athenaeus of Naucratis in the Deipnosophistae. The specific title of his historical work is lost. Athenaeus preserves a brief note on a Lydian headdress, suggesting Pythaenetus's work contained ethnographic or cultural details concerning Asia Minor.

His significance lies in his preservation as a name within the fragmentary tradition of Greek historiography. His citation by Athenaeus places him among the many minor, specialized historians whose lost works were consulted by later scholars for antiquarian detail. The fragment provides a minor datum for Greek knowledge of Lydian material culture.

Works (1)

- Ἀποσπάσματα περὶ Αἰγίνης · Aeginetica: Fragments on Aegina · 7 passages